Cats in danger

‘Big cats’ is the name for tigers, lions, leopards and jaguars. The ‘big cats’ are in crisis.

Tigers:

Number of wild tigers in 1900 were 100,000 and in 2010 were 3500 tigers. Tigers live in many places in Asia – from very cold mountains in the Himalayas to very hot areas. They usually live in places without people, but people sometimes move into the tigers’ areas.

Tigers hunt other animals. They hunt at night. In places without people, tigers also hunt in the day. They usually hunt wild animals, but they sometimes hunt domestic animals. Tigers are in crisis because people move into their areas and local people sometimes kill them.

In 1980 tigers were 20 in Huai Kha Khaeng Wildlife Park and in 2010 tigers were 60.

Saksit Simcharoen works at the Huai Kha Khaeng Wildlife Park in Thailand. The park is a tiger protective area. It’s a very good place for tigers. About sixty tigers live there. Saksit works with 170 people in the park. He studies the park’s tigers. Saksit goes into the forest at night. He doesn’t see many tigers, but the park has 180 automatic cameras. They can take photos of tigers. Saksit checks the cameras. Every month Saksit writes reports about the tigers in the area and he has a meeting with his colleagues. Saksit loves his job because the tigers in the park are not in danger.
